As David Morgan writes in The Sacred Gaze: Religious Visual Culture in Theory and Practice, "religions and their visual cultures configure social relations, over time and space and between one lifeworld and another" (9). In Birmingham, Alabama, communication of belief happens through many artistic media: stained glass, granite, bronze, oil on canvas, and pavers on the ground.

"Sacred gaze" denotes any way of seeing that invests its object—an image, a person, a time, a place—with spiritual significance.
Drawing from many different fields, David Morgan investigates key aspects of vision and imagery in a variety of religious traditions.

The Sacred Gaze – Visual Culture-How is religious engagement seen through acts of seeing, looking?-Not existing prior to it, but existing through it.-Associate certain images with having an amount of power or authority.-We not only need to look at the image, but we need to look at the responses and relationships between viewer and images.
